

Drinkin' Again

words & music by John Dandrea

I've got a friend, he's drinkin' again tonight his wife's five thousand miles away he sees her face in every glass he drinks to make it through another day I know my friend, this song can't bring her here but until you're back together, let's have another beer.

I know the days just seems to drag on by as though they'll never end but it won't be long until you're on that plane and you'll be home again
I know my friend, this song can't bring her here
but until you're back together,
let's have another beer.

Now me an' you been in this bar all night and things are gettin' kinda dim and all these cowgirls make me dizzy - did we go out, or they come in?
I know my friend, this song can't bring her here
but until you're back together, let's have another beer. . . . and go home.
