

At Least A Thousand Years

words & music by John Dandrea

life is ever-changing, never standing still there's no such thing as perfect love, and there never will be a life of bliss, a lifetime without tears and I expect I'll tire of you - in at least a thousand years we grow a little older, as the years go by there's a reason we pass on, never knowing why but we are strong together and leave behind our fears and I expect I'll join you - in at least a thousand years

In at least a thousand years, I will never be excited by your eyes, when you look at me and maybe in a thousand years you'll know that I'm the one God wanted you to know we all look to the future, hoping to find a sense of perfect order, a love that's never blind and if our faith is strong, we'll stand before our peers and then I'll hold your hand - for at least a thousand years

that I'm the one God wanted you to know I'm the one God wanted you to know
